HEAL THYSELF
Bulwer Lytton's Bridge.
Where It Touches the Shores and the Great Columns in Kidderton.
"What a beautiful bridge between old age and childhood is religion! how instinctively the child leaps with perfect confidence on entering life, and how intuitively, on quitting life, the old man turns back to prattle as he totters, putting himself again side by side with the infant," remarks Sir Edward Lytton, in his "Strange Story."
Yes, but between this life and the immortal the bridge of life has many high as Lawful arches, through which the wild waters dash and roar in wrath and desolation. Prayer and worship alone do not sustain these. Nature's solid rocks must be unshaken beneath, and human art and skill must rear and fortify the structure overhead. God's will is best exemplified in the laws he has made for the creatures whom He has placed under their control. Neither the child's trustful "Our Father, for the old man's "Forget me not in the midst of mine infirmities," will alter this by the weight of a single feather.
Science and art first—then faith and prayer—is the order of Heaven itself. Eli only came through its agents, and those of middle-aged and old men, not the angels to whom generations of prophets or seers. Is life a burden to you? Does time drag? Is your power to cope with life a problem and duties wearisome? You are not well. Your blood is sluggish and tainted (perhaps) or some important organ is torpid or overworked. This fact may have taken the form of dyspepsia, rheumatism, sour stomach, malaria, pains in the stomach, chronic headache, or any of a dozen other ills. PARKER'S Tonic will invigorate you, as fresh air invigorates those who have been shut up in damp, foul cells. It is a powerful, pure, delicious, scientific cordial—the keystone of the central arch of the bridge of life.

Three Peculiarities

The superior qualities of Hood's Sarsaparilla will be secured by three peculiarities, viz:
First.—The combination of roots, herbs and barks used.
Second.—The proportion in which they are mixed.
Third.—The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.
These are peculiar to Hood's Sarsaparilla and are unlike any other. The result of these peculiarities is a medicine of unheard strength, which effects cures hitherto unknown. A trial, or even a glance at the article, inspires confidence, because it bears unquestionable internal evidence of a thorough understanding on the part of those who originated it.

Unknown To Others

Peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is not to be found in any other preparation, is the one hundred dollar bottle, which is unequaled as to strength and economy. It is by its great strength that Hood's Sarsaparilla gives health-restoring investment, and is truly the cheapest blood purifier in the market. The cures effected by Hood's Sarsaparilla are numerous as they are permanent, and the confidence felt in its power to cure is without parallel. Hood's Sarsaparilla is not a beverage, but a concentrated extract, and a little of it goes a great way. Take only

STATE NEWS

Androscoggin

Thursday night, some one attempted to enter the jewelry store of Arthur Wakefield, at Lisbon. A pane of glass was cut with a diamond from a rear window, and the sash raised. In attempting to climb in, a thrusting latch that set before the window was overturned, which made so much noise that the attempt was abandoned.

Changes in the Lewiston police department have been made in accordance with the elections of Thursday. Capt. John French has been appointed to fill the office of deputy marshal, while deputy O. Bilodeau assumes charge of the department, for the present. Officer L. J. Prentiss will do duty as captain of the night watch. Officer George Marshall is released from duty.

Cumberland.

Mr. E. N. Dexter has opened a cash bill and factory in Brunswick.

Friday morning as the east bound Portland & Ogdensburg train, Conductor Baker, was steaming along about one and one half miles from Crawford station, it plunged into a snow slide which had fallen from Mt. Willard. The snow plow was badly smashed and the engine somewhat stove up. A telegram was sent as soon as possible to Upper Bartlett and a force of about thirty-five men, came. The snow slide was about twenty-five feet deep and extended along the track the distance of 100 feet. The way was cleared at eight o'clock in the evening, and the train did not arrive in Portland until about ten o'clock, Saturday forenoon.

Kennebec.

There is a continued interest at the Adams Memorial Church, Vassalboro. The house is filled each Sabbath. On the 23d of March eight were taken into the church.

The Merchants' National Bank of Gardiner have leased the store in Milliken Block, formerly occupied by Hughes & Moody, as a suitable store for a banking house. They will proceed at once to build a vault and prepare the store for their occupancy.

At a recent meeting of the Vestry of St. Mark's Church, Augusta, a form of pledge was adopted, to be presented to the parishioners, asking their subscriptions for the building of a stone church to cost $25,000. It being the expressed determination of the vestry that no debt be incurred, it is specially provided that no subscriber shall be holden in the sum set opposite his name until the whole $25,000 is pledged. And it is further provided that subscriptions shall only be payable as the progress of the work demands. A committee was appointed to carry the above action into practical effect by obtaining subscriptions.

The site of the Winslow church, in the town of Winslow which for sixty years has been a place for public festivities of the view of the Kennebec village is to be removed, the committee of examination having declared that it is too much decayed to be repaired.

Mrs. Olive R. Sawtelle, wife of Mr. Lewis Sawtelle, and mother of Mr. J. P. Sawtelle, of Waterville, died suddenly and unexpectedly at the age of 77 years and 7 months. She had been in the usual health with the exception of a cold the day previous.

Commencement week at Colby will doubtless be marked by more expensive and elaborate decorations than ever before in connection with the class of '84.

A very sad accident occurred at the Pettingill mills, Hallowell, afternoon, Mr. Thomas Burke having his right hand torn off while at work at the picker. The machine which did that is the cotton to fleece mill which is covered with grating. Mr. Burke is covered by insurance, which is a good thing as he will be unable to work with his right hand for a long time. By neglecting this wise rule the poor man has lost his hand.

Oxford.

The Democratic meeting among the Democrats in Oxford Hill Rhine has lost every sheep in South Paris. Ben Stevens has lost seventeen sheep. Mr. Twitchell has lost three swarms. Other parties have lost more or less, and in all cases it is supposed by dogs which kill for the sport of killing. Mr. Twitchell thinks the death of his is as follows: Soft the dogs. It is probably that the sudden cold has killed the bees, and the dogs have only found the dead.

Sagadahoc.

We had an opportunity recently to visit the Richmond Rice plow, exhibiting the plows to the public soon to be erected by the Congregational society in that place. The building will be of commercial proportions, the covering capacity of 42x75 feet on the ground floor, and will be divided as follows: Audience room 24x48 feet, which will seat 200 persons, with a gallery over the same. The rooms were drawn and specified by Messrs. A. M. Wilson, Willis and Smith of Lewiston.

Somerset.

The Clinton Cooper Co. at Guilford are doing extensive business in the manufacture of pails, tubs, etc. The Piscataquis Observer reports the Indian Trail Journal. During the past winter they have shipped 1,963 sets, which is to be added to New York and two carloads to Clifton. They have a contract to supply a large New York firm with 10,000 sets, which they intend to fill by the first of July, besides supplying a large trade in the West. They have piled out some 30,000 so far this year, which will be added to the 200,000 of last season, making 230,000 of last and several thousand more will be ready for sawing. From fifteen to eighteen men are employed, the company is composed of Messrs. A. M. Wilson, Willis and Smith of Lewiston.

Waldo.

Woodman's Notes of Winterport, were burned one night last week. All the contents, except the shoeing tools, were saved.

The new iron work put in on the old Custom House, Portland, has fallen in pieces, which cost the town of $18 00, caused by Monday.

Cuban Cigar-Makers.

HABITS OF THESE WORKMEN IN NEW-YORK—THEIR HEADINESS AND THEIR QUARTERS.

It is an accepted fact in the cigar trade that nobody out Cuba can make Havana cigars, and, as a consequence the twelve or fifteen hundred Cuban cigar makers in New York are better paid and cared for than any other workmen. They have the monopoly of their work, and through the power of privileges and by and through the association which shelters cigar manufacturers which Havana cigars are made, can directly control the supply of labor and prevents the over-stocking of the market.

It is upon work with the pave, upon which contractors bid, and upon which the first workman on the higher grades of cigars will be employed. The Cuban workingman of one of the largest manufactories is one of the most comfortable places in the city—about 250 in a crowded room each with cigar in his mouth, hastily engaged in manipulating the tobacco.

On a high stool in the centre of the room is perched a man with a pile of papers by his side, who is reading in Spanish, in a sort of semi-hearty tone to be heard by every workman in the room, the news of the day. The Spanish papers in this city, as well as the principal journals of Havana are read thoroughly. When the New York daily papers are taken up, translated and read, the reader is employed by the firm, in this way is one of the most important parts of the factory. The cigar workmen is particularly active while this work is kept up. If it were not for the reader, they would talk among themselves, and it is a peculiarity of the Cuban that he cannot work and talk at the same time, so it is absolutely necessary for him to get all the talking. Their work is entirely mechanical and hence the employment of the reader to prevent them from talking.

The Cuban cigar maker is a constant smoker, and this only at long intervals that he is found without a cigar or cigarette in his mouth. Among his most cherished privileges is that of making up as many smokers as he can use. He is an expert in tobacco, and dislikes its waste, and will use only the finest Vuelta Abajo for his smokers. Consequently the item of "smokers" for the manufacturer who is familiar with the experiment soon discovered that there were mysterious disappearances of tobacco, and concluded to go back to the old custom. The men seldom abuse the liberty given them in the matter of "smokers," and in the isolated cases where they have done so have been promptly and severely disciplined by the union.

The Cuban cigar-maker is clannish in his habits and refuses to have anything to do with other cigar-makers. He prefers to fight his battles alone. The great centre of the Havana cigar industry in New York is about Malden Lane and Pearl Street. In the neighborhood are situated a number of restaurants, which make a specialty of preparing food after the Spanish and Cuban methods, and in these places at the dinner hour and after the day's work is done the workmen assemble and feast on their favorite dishes, redolent of garlic, and make merry with the strong Catalonian wine, which is generally furnished.

OPENING THE FOUNTAINS.

In numberless bulbs beneath the skin is secreted the liquid substance which gives the hair its texture, color and gloss. When this secretion stops, the hair begins at once to become dry, lustreless, brittle and gray. Is that the condition of your hair? If so, apply Parker's Hair Balsam at once. It will restore the color, gloss and life by renewing the action of nature. The Balsam is not an oil, nor a dye, but an elegant toilet article, highly appreciated because of its cleanliness.

Republican District Convention.

The Republicans of the Fourth Congressional District of Maine, composed of the Counties of Penobscot, Piscataquis, Aroostook and Washington, are hereby invited to send delegates to a Convention to be held at the City Hall, in Bangor, on Tuesday, April 29th, 1884, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative from this District to the Forty-third Congress of the United States, and of nominating a candidate for President and Elector, and of selecting two delegates and two alternate delegates to the Republican National Convention to be held at Chicago, Illinois, Tuesday, June 3d, 1884, and of transacting such other business as may properly come before said Convention.

Each City, town and plantation will be entitled to one delegate, and for every seventy-five votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1880 one delegate, and for each fraction of forty votes, one delegate.

Bangor, Me., March 17th, 1884.

It is stated that ex-Judge and ex-Senator David Davis, of Illinois, will act with the Republican party this year.

The young Democrats of Brooklyn have indorsed the Morrison bill, and yet Mr. Morrison is far from being happy.

Congressman Reed has been invited to deliver an address on political issues before the State Republican Convention of New Jersey, which meets on the 17th instant.

Hon. S. L. Milliken telegraphed to Augusta, Monday, that the vote of the House, fixing April 5th to consider the public building bills, ensures the passage of the bill for erecting a public building in Augusta.

The new dormitory at Yale is now assured. The corporation intend, however, to put fifty thousand dollars or more with the gift of Mrs. Lawrence and build a dormitory in every way equal to Durfee.

It is suggested that Watterson's efforts in the interest of the whiskey bill and free trade, during his stay in Washington, are not yielding a rich harvest. One is already dead and the other is growing weaker all the time.

The New York World, a Democratic organ, says: Mr. Morrison feels ridiculous now in Washington now McDonald has returned to Indiana, and Watterson has returned to Kentucky. But Hurd is there to brace him up with the documentary evidence that the country is sighing for a horizontal reduction.

The Senate has passed the Blair educational bill and it now remains to be seen what disposition the House will make of it. As passed the bill appropriates $77,000,000 to be distributed among the states in proportion to their illiteracy on the basis of the census of 1880, the payments of the money to extend over a series of eight years. The amount to be distributed the first year is $7,000,000, the second $10,000,000, the third $11,000,000, the sums then diminishing at the rate of $2,000,000 annually until the eight year, when the appropriations shall cease.

The great issue of the year, says the Tribune, is the tariff. It will play the determining part in the Presidential campaign. Shall the policy of protection under which the country has so greatly prospered be continued, or shall a radically different policy be inaugurated? The Republican party is ready with its answer. There is not uncertainty about its position on the tariff. It believes that to abandon the protective policy would be to inflict a serious blow upon American industries, and at its forthcoming National Convention this conviction will be expressed with no uncertain sound. Everybody understands this.

The Republicans of Calais did a good day's work Monday and handsomely re-elected Mayor Murchie whose administration of the municipal affairs has been such as to commend itself to the voters of that enterprising city. Last year the Democrats did not make much of a contest and the Republican candidate was elected by 116 majority, but this spring, on the eve of a Presidential election, they had their party workers out in force and with the aid of a considerable amount of money succeeded in polling their full vote, showing an increase of 48 over last year. The Republicans, in the face of this determined opposition, increased their last year's vote 26, gave Mayor Murchie a clean majority of 146 and elected six out of the seven aldermen. This endorsement must be gratifying to Mayor Murchie as it certainly is to his Republican friends throughout the State.

The anonymous tariff circular signed "Many Democrats" has been the cause of much comment in Washington. It bears internal evidence of having been prepared by some competent person. The supporters of the tariff are indignant at it. They ascribe it to Converse, to Randall, and some have even said that it is the work of a Tilden literary bureau. Great pains have been taken, evidently, to conceal the authorship. Copies of the circular have been received at some newspaper offices written in a woman's hand. Whoever may be the author the circular is a new disturbing element in Democratic councils. It expresses in a very emphatic manner the views of a very large faction in the party, and this happens to be the faction which controls the balance of power between the majority of the Democratic caucus and the Republicans.

At one of the Republican primaries in Youngstown, O., a few days since, John Gilmore, a puddler, who has hitherto been prominently affiliated with the Democrats, appeared to vote. His right being questioned, he said: "Heretofore I have voted with and worked in concert with the Democratic party; but from this time on I am a Republican. I am a working man and earn my bread by toiling in a rolling mill. For the past twenty years I have eaten heartily of Democratic promises, never having been in a position to place anything else before its hungry followers until last year. Now that they have opportunity, what have they done, to make good the twenty years of promise? The first thing attempted was a reduction of the tariff, which is substantially an effort to reduce workingmen to a level with those of the underpaid English workers."

Blaine on the Pacific Coast.

[From the San Francisco Argonaut.]

In response to our invitation to an expression of choice for the Presidential candidates we are receiving from the states and territories of the Pacific Coast many hundreds of letters. The following very strong presentation of the claims of Mr. Blaine for President comes from Butte, Montana. The writer, whose name we have, but who, for modesty, writes under a nom de plume, favors Lincoln for Vice-President. We are now receiving hundreds of letters and postal cards from all parts of the country containing the signatures of one hundred and fifty-four persons—straws voted at small gatherings, social and otherwise. When all are in we shall be able to reflect with unmistakable precision the choice of the coast. We submit a few specimens of these letters, from many of which we shall take the liberty to make extracts, and if not too overwhelming, to print the names of all not marked confidential.—The Editor.

Editors Argonaut: I have read your invitation to the electors of the Pacific States, asking them to forward you in writing their choice for "President and Vice-Presidential nomination by the National conventions of both political parties." Now, while the citizens of Montana, like those of other territories, have not the privilege of expressing their choice at the President and Vice-President through the ballot-box, they have a voice in the conventions which select the nominees for those high offices, and have also much to do with the Presidential question, [illegible] entitled to a pigeon-hole in the sanctum of the Argonaut, in which to place the names of our choice. I believe you will agree with this view, I pardon me for intruding upon your valuable time. Whom I say that, as a Republican, my choice for President is James G. Blaine, and for Vice-President Robert Lincoln. Hence that I express the wishes of thousands of citizens who are residents in both states and territories, and would vote for those gentlemen had they the privilege.

Our reasons for selecting Blaine are his general great ability, his faithful devotion to his country—"America for American's" is his unchangeable motto—and his splendid statesmanship. As an executive officer, a parliamentarian, an orator and statesman, he has hardly an equal. The whole history of his official life has been such as to command itself to the voters of this country. This opinion will be corroborated by the statement, we maintain that no Senator upon this broad continent is more aware than Blaine of the importance to a people like ours, geographically, as our country is, of a navy. He knows that to induce people to settle the valleys away back in the interior of the country, and to encourage the miner, who delves in the mountains for metals, and the manufacturer, who follows those harbingers of civilization, our great industries must be protected from the cheap labor and cheap carrying power of Europe. He knows that the better the cattle, fabrics manufactured in the United States are especially adapted to the climate of the South American countries, and these are fitted for them, of natural right belong to us; but these, through a policy which never dared look over the limits of the District of Columbia, we have been excluded from our door-steps by England and France.

The idea advanced by that soldier in President Garfield's Cabinet, of calling a congress of these countries to meet in Washington, was the grandest display of statesmanship that ever emanated from an American statesman—the emancipation of the slaves alone excepted. This masterstroke penetrated too deeply into the future for the average loudmouthed Congressman and editor to comprehend. The idea fell upon them like a mountain, and their bewilderment was only equaled by the opportunity endeavoring to escape from the force of a cyclone. Finally, a general disruption loomed up in their defective vision, and their cry was war! war! war! which they imagined they were surrounded. They could see no extension of our market; they could see no shipbuilding; all roads across the valleys, they could see no miners climbing mountains in search of treasures, and a general development and rapid peopling of these semi-civilized and partially developed portions, resulting in natural wealth and resources, as followed by manufactures and a general produce for my lounge, and the establishing of an active, permanent business with a liberal country, partially settled by our own people, unlawful of character, full of push and energy. No, but they could see war and war they made on Blaine.

All sorts of propositions and surmises were thrown out from the various craniums of projects that could see nothing outside of the district or office in which they lived or revolved. They accused him of having a South American "policy," of a desire to establish a "protectorate" over those countries, and God only knows what more. But, after four years of reflection, what do we see? Bills introduced in Congress with the express object in view of extending our market for agricultural and manufactured products into South America. This is a blunt, novel way of creating a market; France and England generally first make the acquaintance of the party with whom they wish to deal. They usually assist him a little, when they find him in straightened circumstances, and the purchases of general merchandise are made, and in this way they have created markets for their products as broad as the globe.

An act of Congress does not make a market. It is diplomacy which makes it, and no one knows this better than Blaine. The United States must sooner or later adopt his method, and it is none too soon to begin. For the firm stand he took against Monsieur de Lesseps—the former France and England—on the Panama Canal question, he again called up the barking, addle-headed politician and editor, who at once reported the old cry of "War! war!" Blaine does not believe that separation of the United States from South America by a giant fortified at each end by massive forts and European guns, and these again guarded by floating islands of iron and steel, indefinitely, Arabian Nights, etc., carrying eighty-ton cannon, pieces of furniture, is conducive to the safety and future welfare of the country; and, let me ask, who does? But still the stunted dwarfs and burlesque statesmen howled and blew their trumpets without asking themselves the question, "Where do we live?" The canal goes on and the menace approaches. By and by the formidable fangs of France and England will stretch out, like the tentacles of an devil fish, over the territory on either side of the canal. Then it will take something more than a fishing-smack and a dog-fight to cope with them. They have a foothold, and henceforth will have a say in American questions.

Blaine's policy was not war, but preventive war. He saw the danger and sought to prevent it, as was intelligent. It took no mind-reader to see it. But you have sounded like a pickpocket. In all the positions he has held through life he has given evidence of being endowed with a superior intellect—always able, never failing. His short career as a Cabinet officer was sufficient to indicate his superior foresight; and the policy he outlined would place the United States in that proud among nations to which she is entitled—at the head. This can be accomplished without resort to war with swords. Blaine has the temerity to look Europe squarely in the face, and tell her where she belongs. Every act of his political life vouches for that the real interest of the American people is uppermost in his mind. The people know this, and they have called and keep calling, for him for President. If he does not receive the nomination, the people will be deprived of their choice, partly through jealousy of his natural brilliant intellect, and partly through spite. With him as President, assisted by an agreeable Congress, a new era in the political history of the country would begin, as was the case with Lincoln. While the natural resources of the country are not yet far from being fully developed, the country is rapidly filling up, and the strictly local policy, which has hitherto characterized the Government must some day be departed from.

It is not, of course, yet necessary to try and gain absolute possession of territory. But we must gain a firmer diplomatic foothold, for the purpose of extending our market for the increasing product of our land. It would pay, in a pecuniary point of view, to have the British and French monarchies on South America and hold them in check. Blaine has the power, the commercial faculties, to outline a policy which future generations can follow to their enriching benefit. "Doubt," in connection with his election need not be expressed. His election is as sure as was that of Washington. He is the only Republican in the United States who has a following sufficient to make the campaign one called. His name in the Democratic camp will spell defeat all terror. His nomination would scan the Democracy to shreds. Should he fail to receive the nomination in the Republican convention, I believe he could be elected on an independent ticket, as a strong man if you cannot reach Three-fifths of the people want him for President; and in justice to him and the great party of which he is a member, he should receive the nomination at Chicago. He is entitled to it through genuine merit and strength with the people.

Alfonso.

Butte, Montana, March 7, 1884.

An ex-Senator says: "The Republican party was born in the schoolhouse, and the student's lamp has not yet been put out."

In a recent interview Congressman Reed said: "I do not see any prospect of the House passing the tariff bill. Of course the House is unbelievable. A turn may be given to the bill at any time which brings a new vision. But without reasoning to prophesy it can be said in a general way that the only thing that the Democrats are united upon is the desire to beat the Republicans. When it comes to the question of a way to beat us they can't agree at all. They can't even agree on Whiskey and if they can't agree on Whiskey you may well imagine they are not likely to agree on anything else. When the question of party profit comes up they never have much more than a bare majority for it and never for long. . . . There is no likelihood of any bill of importance passing. The House under the rules now in operation. It was not intended that any such bills should be passed. The rules only need an improvement to make them complete in preventing the introduction of public business. If revenue bills could be kept out except by unanimous consent, we should then be able to do daily work. Mr. Randall and his friends consider the next business of Congress, viz.: to settle the public accounts, dispute the appropriation bills, and let the rest of public affairs take care of themselves.

Most of the present House members were elected in a cyclone. They are trying to adjust a way to accommodate themselves to a second cyclone, which this fourth Rule may reflect them. They might as well look for the sun at midnight."

Establish a Capital.

As a means for providing and protecting those who depend upon a single life for support, as a father maintains his family, a husband his wife, nothing has ever been offered to the public which equals Life Insurance. It dates back to the ancients, and is the result of the efforts to shield those who are left, to the extent insured. A money equivalent for his labor and toil—something to take the place of his earnings and income.

By paying a small sum annually, a man can at once establish a capital, which, in the event of his death, will indemnify his family, and, like a thief, relieve the danger of the people. Life insurance was known about five years before the United States became a independent nation. It had its origin in England, and under the fostering care of the father of modern life insurance, it is kept pace with her advancement, and was the last resource to the impoverished, when all others had proved such a blessing to the world.

(The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, was organized December 10, 1846, and Jan. 1, 1884, had issued Assets of $22,572,101 40

FORTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS—First Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 8. Mr. Hawley, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably a bill for the relief of Gen. Wm. W. Averill. It was placed on the calendar.

Bills were introduced and appropriately referred as follows

By Mr. Garland, to provide a uniform mode of procedure in civil cases in the courts of the United States.

The Senate proceeded to the calendar of cases unobjected to.

A bill for the relief of the officers and crew of the Monitor who participated in the action with the rebel iron-clad Merrimac being objected to by Mr. Cockrell went over

The Senate then agreed to take up the naval appropriation bill. Many of the amendments proposed by the Senate Committee were agreed to. On reaching the provisions relating to ordnance a long discussion of the defenseless condition of the sea coast and the inferiority of the navy was begun.

Mr. Morgan claimed that the sea coasts of the United States were in a more defenseless condition than any of the petty maritime powers of the world

Mr. Davis favored the purchase by the Government of several of an armor establishment for a foundry which would lease the Government in a position not to be entirely at the mercy of private enterprise

Mr. Johns of Florida favored appropriations for ordnance but thought the navy the first thing necessary

Mr. Hale gave notice of an amendment to be hereafter moved appropriating $8,000,000 for the purchase and erection of a plant for casting, forging, rough-boring and tempering guns up to 100 tons ready for delivery at the gun factories, including the cost of a process of liquid compression

Mr. Vest lamented the absence of a navy and commercial marine Mr. Vest gave way for a matter to go into executive session as it was stated that the Foreign Relations Committee wished to submit some matters

The Senate then went into executive session and afterwards adjourned

House.

Messrs. O'Neill and Randall presented resolutions of the Vessel Owners and Captains Associations of Philadelphia urging an appropriation for sustaining hydrographic offices at seaport cities and for publishing pilot charts, referred

The House then, as a special order, went into Committee of the Whole on bills relating to territories.

The first bill taken up was one to authorize the appointment of a commission by the President to run and mark boundary lines between a portion of the Indian Territory and Texas in connection with a similar commission to be appointed by Texas. The land involved lies between the north and south forks of the Red river and consists of 3,000 square miles.

Mr. Reed of Maine said according to the terms of the treaty of 1828 between the United States and Mexico a boundary line was fixed at Red river, as laid down by Melliship map. This made no reference to the north fork of the Red river and the boundary must be determined by that map. Therefore the land in dispute belonged to the Indian Territory.

Mr. Culberson, of Texas said the whole dispute was whether the 100th degree of longitude crossed the Red river exactly where the makers of the treaty had supposed

Mr. Reed offered a substitute authorizing a detail of one or more army officers who in conjunction with such persons as may be appointed, shall ascertain at what point the 100th degree of longitude crosses the Red river in accordance with the treaty of 1828

Mr. Belford, of California, addressing himself to Mr. Reed lectured that gentleman who came from the shoe of New England for interfering with western measures and assured him that "if you manage your section of the country well, we will try to manage ours," and said his customary appeal to the South to unite with those of the West so we will put you (the east) down

The substitute having been rejected the committee rose and the bill passed—138 to 67.

The next bill passed was one declaring the Supreme Court of each territory shall consist of a chief justice and three associate justices and providing that every territory shall be divided into four judicial districts and a district court shall be held annually by one of the justices of the Supreme Court.

The bill requiring governors of the territories to be residents of the territory to which he is appointed at least two years preceding appointment was opposed by Mr. Lawson of Iowa and Mr. Tatom, of Connecticut and advocated by Mr. Maginnis, of Montana, Mr. Brents, of Washington Territory, and Mr. Hillman of South Carolina.

Mr. Hart, of Ohio, moved to recommit the bill with instructions to the Committee on Territories to except from its provisions the territory of Utah

The motion was lost and the bill passed.

The Speaker laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War recommending an appropriation of $124,150 for the erection of barracks, etc., at Davis Island, New York, and the House adjourned

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Bank Closed by the Examiner

ST ALBANS, Vt April 8. It was announced this morning that the First National Bank would be closed to business to-day Hank Examiner Hendee closed the institution this morning because they did not have sufficient funds to meet their drafts in Boston Saturday President Sowles took the Saturday night train for Boston for the purpose of arranging for the payment of these drafts On account of disappointment in receiving the expected funds the bank was unable to meet the demands made upon it Monday Morning as usual was drawn out by the depositors on that day and the bank was left without funds to do business with this morning. Mr. Sowles has not yet returned and the exact situation cannot be learned to-day. Under the circumstances Mr. Hendee thought it best not to have the bank open for business to-day, and it may be that the institution will not be open again at all.

The cause of the trouble is currently reported to be unfortunate speculation in stocks by the Sowles Brothers, both of whom have lost heavily. There seems to be no reason why the depositors should not be paid in full, even should the bank permanently suspend. The deposits amount to about $215,000. The last statement of the bank showed assets, including loans and discounts, to the amount of $281,233; U. S. bonds, $100,000; other bonds and mortgages, $20,000; due from banks and bankers, $23,000; real estate, $25,000; and other items making a total of $378,250. The liabilities, including capital stock, $100,000; surplus fund, $10,000; national bank notes outstanding, $89,080; individual deposits, $152,747 demand certificates of deposit, $18,022; cashier's checks, $6,157 due to other banks, $7,719; notes rediscounted, $51,350.

Examiner Hendee will at once make a complete investigation and if not feasible to continue business the bank will go into voluntary liquidation. The assets are not of the quick kind and to speedily realize on them will be difficult.

Woman's Temperance Crusade.

TENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

March 20th, 1884.

Mrs. President and Sisters of the Crusade:

We come, to-night, listening to the music of bells that ring out clear and sweet the tenth year of our temperance work, to celebrate our tenth anniversary, and also to lay before the public who have so kindly aided us, something of the last year's work.

But ere we do this, let us lift the curtain from those years that have fled so quickly, bearing their records whether of good or evil, the results of which, more or less influence society. When the waves of the West made war upon the liquor traffic, there first sought strength in prayer and in the Christian humility they asked "home protection" for the salvation of the "fallen ones." In obedience to this request, it was decided for a week of sorrow to kneel upon the floor of Mother's heart, crowning the head of the "fallen ones" with the holiest of all days while bitter tears would flow, not mourning, like Rachel, because their children were not, but because they were immortal.

Thus was the redress for them, given by prayer and patient pleading. We had the good Law of Prohibition, yet much of the misery arising from the illegal traffic was around us, the law was not enforced, intoxicants were sold in many places, for the Prohibitory Law was taking root in New England homes, and our State quite its foreign invasion. The good work done by our Watchers, was to plant the principles of Watchfulness, we pledged ourselves together in Christian sympathy to do what we could to save the fallen, and keep others from falling victims to the cruel, strong drink.

We choose for our motto "Under the cross of God and humanity." It was indeed a cross, as many of us can well remember, for our lines were for always the hardest places. Yet from this a theme the work has come to through our State until the people are ready and willing to acknowledge its power. Still there are some who pull to us that the liquor traffic gives labor to many people, it is just such of trade, a helper to many of the industries, and the Government derives a large income from the same. Such pleas as these are urged against us, but nothing can be argued against the fact that it takes more labor than it gives. Look at the crimes committed under the direct influence of, outweighing any revenues.

[illegible] dollars of intellect destroyed by [illegible] stated, that [illegible] ten millions for its abolition.

[illegible] set the price

[illegible] closely related [illegible] other hand [illegible] the injury to the [illegible] of Intoxicants, [illegible] like injury to the mental [illegible] powers. It is the one evil of [illegible] labor, if not abolished, covers [illegible] nation with infamy and [illegible]

[illegible] see how many loving hearts [illegible] how many home-lights [illegible] which cheer [illegible] over the [illegible] the dark night of despair, we should indeed be led to say that the [illegible] but a farther, God is evidence, will be good to evil, in the [illegible] of the fruit. A good tree must bring forth good fruit [illegible] bring forth good fruit.

Our complete community. Whether [illegible] city or hamlet, you will find [illegible] the drum, all the [illegible] and noble red ribbon, proud [illegible] and long will it take to [illegible] hearts and purify into [illegible] influence.

In our last we [illegible] that will come up for the future, a better, more enlightened sentiment [illegible] and [illegible] and it will be [illegible] for any. Shall it be [illegible] of [illegible] and God will be [illegible]

[illegible] Mrs. President, [illegible] to the manner in which you have conducted the affairs of the Crusade, for the ten years you have been at the head. You have given your time, and expended your best judgment. It must be pleasing to you to think, during this long time, no dissatisfaction has arisen.

I do not pretend to [illegible] we have made no mistakes as a society. We long to [illegible] have done better, and we have prayed more, earnest and trustful ourselves, we have looked for the same in others.
